

Special Offer for French Lycée

Personalized, signed and inscribed gift copies of first edition.

Acclaimed new narrative nonfiction about indigenous survival strategies, climate-proofing and adapting to water scarcity.

[Guarantee: $7 of each book will be donated to Lycée.]

*Q: Should you read a riveting book on climate adaptation?
Or invest in people who build resilience through markets?*

A: Do both at the same time. Here's how.

Before moving to the Haight, Lycée parent James G. Workman (father of Camille in K2C) spent seven years in Africa where he explored the causes and consequences of water scarcity, and what we can learn -- from the oldest indigenous society besieged in the Kalahari Desert -- about conserving water and energy. Now his book – Heart of Dryness: How the Last Bushmen Can Help Us Endure the Coming Age of Permanent Drought – can help Lycée La Perouse to do the same. See <http://www.heartofdryness.com>

The Booksmith

Because they want to support Lycee, the author and the legendary local San Francisco bookstore, The Booksmith, have teamed up offer a special advantage to you that even Amazon can't match.

You'll get a hardcover first edition signed by the author with a written inscription to whomever you wish saying whatever you like. When you order, be sure to mention "Lycée," and Booksmith will invest 15% of each book to the school. As an extra bonus, the author will dedicate his royalties, for a combined contribution of $7.00 per book to Lycée.

PRAISE FOR HEART OF DRYNESS:

“An astonishing synthesis of human and natural history, folly, scarcity, beauty, dignity and power.” --
Rick Bass, author of The Wild Marsh

“An investigative and story-telling triumph...showing a way back to accountability, sustainability, abundant life, and hope.”--David James Duncan, author of The Brothers K

“Workman's experiences and insights are fascinating... a real page-turner.” --Elizabeth Marshall Thomas, author of The Harmless People

“A fascinating read and great adventure story.” --
Bruce Babbitt, former U.S. secretary of the Interior

The lead protagonist of the story, Qoroxloo Duxee, devoted her lifetime to survival strategies and coping mechanisms. The author devoted 7 years distilling it all down to 247 pages. By investing in their experience, you invest in:

- Yourself. As you absorb their lessons into your life, you prepare your community for the hard, hot, dry thirsty times ahead;
- Your bank account. The book's insights can help your family save hundreds of dollars in water, groceries and energy bills;
- Your ecosystem. Efficiency relieves resource stress and pollution pressures.

Reap while you read.

Enjoy as you empower.

Engage as you're entertained.

This special offer provides you – and anyone you forward it to -- with a personal, signed and inscribed limited first edition, while helping a school we believe in.

Heart of Dryness* makes a wonderful gift. Benefits end on Thanksgiving, allowing you plenty of time to complete all your Christmas shopping early. Thank you.
